IPS Index Dynamic 70 (Super & TTR) Quarterly Report

As of 30/06/2020

June Quarter 2020

Equity markets have rebounded strongly from their lows at the end of March 2020 as the global economy has emerged from lockdown and major economies have made progress in managing COVID-19. Markets were slightly more subdued in June than in April and May as easing restrictions sparked new outbreaks in the Americas, Middle East, India and, at the end of the month, in Melbourne.

Throughout the quarter, mining stocks, the IT sector and consumer staples have led a recovery in the ASX 200 (the top 200 stocks on the Australian Stock Exchange). Supermarkets, internet-based companies and providers of essential goods have benefited from increased traffic during the lockdown while mining stocks have rebounded in large part because disruptions to the Brazilian supply chain have raised the price level of iron ore and other bulk commodities.

Technology giants like Amazon and Google have also led the rebound in international shares as more people were compelled to work, shop and do business online.

Over the year to June 30, the portfolio (assuming all distributions were reinvested) delivered a return of 1.44% while the benchmark returned -2.11%.

We strongly outperformed because the fund went into the crisis positioned with a more defensive allocation designed to protect capital in a downturn. We subsequently took advantage of steep falls at the end of March by reducing our allocation to fixed income and increasing our allocation to the CLAL Index Property/Infrastructure Fund and the RARE Emerging Markets Fund
